5.9 Home Schooling Scheme for Children with Special Needs

Amid the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic scenario, children with special needs (CWSN) are among the most affected sections of society. Interruption in support due to closure of schools and restriction in the movement of support staff has rendered their life miserable. Further, the prevalent online system of education does not cater to the needs of these children because of lack of required infrastructure. Keeping in mind the problems in the existing system of education and the skeletal support system in existence for these differently-abled children due to the COVID-19 pandemic, we need a new scheme to cater to their rapidly evolving needs.

There will be some children with severe degrees of disability who may not be able to attend regular school because of the severity of their disability. If they are sent to a regular school, they might not be able to cope, as they will not be able to respond to a standardized curriculum and evaluation system. A large percentage of CWSN are deprived of their right to education due to the severe nature of their disabilities. They need a special education programme outside the purview of the regular classroom.

The Department of School Education (DoSE) shall design a special Homeschooling Scheme for Children with Special Needs in consultation with experts.
